

Martina Drventić, LL.M., is a research assistant – doctoral student of the Croatian Science Foundation at the Faculty of Law Osijek. She graduated from the Faculty of Law in Osijek in 2013 and enrolled in the Doctoral Study Programme of Law in 2018. Her research focuses on the private international family and status law. She is currently involved in two international research groups within projects dealing with the cross-border protection of children and families – Facilitating cross-border family life: towards a common European understanding – EuFams II and Protection of Abducting Mothers in Return Proceedings: Intersection between Domestic Violence and Parental Child Abduction – POAM. She has a practical experience in the field of international child protection, obtained while working as the expert associate at the Croatian Central Authority seated within the Ministry of Social Policy and Youth (2014-2016), and research experience from being a junior researcher at the project Planning the future of cross-border families: a path through coordination – EUFam's (2016-2018) and research associate on the national scientific project Cross-border removal and retention of a child – Croatian practice and European expectations (2017).